Method

Panelists will open each discussion with remarks of no more than five minutes. The moderator will then facilitate conversation among the panelists before discussion is opened up to all participants – in plenary session or smaller groups. In the tradition of Caux, the accent will be on listening and dialogue. The Caux conference centre offers a unique atmosphere and spirit. Since its beginnings after World War II, Caux has encouraged reflection, a personal acceptance of responsibility, and a shared commitment to work for solutions. This will be a 'conference in community' where participants take part in the practical running of the house.
